VOL. 5. NO. 39 MONESSEN, PA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 9, 1906. SIX CENTS THE WEEK

ALL ENJOYED THE MERCHANT'S PICNIC AT GROVE YESTERDAY

List of Attractions Proved Very Interesting to Spectators.---Names of Those Who Won Prizes.

The merchants picnic in Lynns grove yesterday was marred to some extent by the rain and threatening conditions of the weather but notwithstanding this a large crowd was present and the day was thoroughly enjoyed. The program was carried out in detail. Ample provision was on the grounds for every person, furnished, by the grocers and the dinner was as advertised, plenty for all. During the afternoon many new features of amusement were introduced among the number being ball games for men and throwing contests for the ladies. The winners of the prizes were as follows:

EVENT	FIRST PRIZE	SECOND PRIZE
200 yard dash, men	Wm. Laird	Ed. Williams
100 yard dash, men	Wm. Laird	Ed. Williams
100 yard dash, boys	Chas. Meyers	Wm Lowstutter
50 yard dash, girls	Mary Hopkins	Carrie Giffin
50 yard dash, ladies	Jennie Krull	Miss Lowstutter
50 yard dash, fat men	Squire Shuster	Frank McMahon
50 yard dash, married women	Mrs. Agnew	Mrs. Hill
50 yard dash, boys,	Clare Ferguson
50 yard dash, men	Jno. Prayther	Geo. Sherwin
Throwing base ball, men.	Wm. Laird	Wm. Woods
Thowing base ball, ladies	Miss Westwood	Miss Jenkins
Standing broad jump, men	John Prather	Thomas Lape
Running broad jump, men	Jno. Prayther	Cliff. Thompson
Hop, step and jump, men	Thos. Lape	Wm. Laird
Running broad jump, boys	Wm. Lowstutter	Jno. Riley
Potatoe race, ladies	Miss Westwood	Miss Meyers
Egg spoon race, ladies	Miss Harris	Mrs. Chrisman
Potatoe race, men	Cliff. Thompson	Geo. Lowstutter
Sack race, men.	R. H. Campbell	Wm. Searles
Standing 4 jumps, ladies	Miss Westwood	Miss Krull
Hop, step and jump, boys	J. McLaughlin

The afternoon's program was started about 1 o'clock and the various contests were watched with great interest. The fat mans race was especially amusing and was one of the chief events of the day. A. N. Shuster was the winner although Frank McMahon proved a close second H. N. Odbert who was "an also ran" was entirly out classed on account of a game leg.

The womans egg spoon race was quite exciting and came in for a full share of attention. The calling of the race however was a signal for score keeper Boyd's troubles to begin. Several of the participants used chewing gum with which to paste the egg to the spoon and these were promptly disqualified. As a result of the race several of the ladies became the possessors of badly bespattered skirts

The woman's 50 yard dash was also the cause for much amusement and today "I'd have won it but down I fell" is floating over nearly every back yard fence in town.

The Woman's throwing match occupied considerable time owing to the number which participated in it but was interesting nevertheless. The attempt of some of the fair sex to hurl the sphere through space was the cause of much comment among the male onlookers.

When the men's sack race was pulled off every one was given an opportunity to laugh and when it was finished it is a safe bet that there was not a case of blues on the grounds.

The men's races furnished some excellent sport and in one instance it was necessary for the contestants to run the second time in order to decide the winner. Even then the finish was extremely close and exciting. Each event in turn is deserving of comment, but suffice it to say that all passed off in a satisfactory and pleasing manner.

Two base ball games between picked nines were played and both drew appreciative crowds. One between the Wright and Beamer aggregations ended in a score of 2 to 2, while Pore's team nearly lambasted the life out of Shuster's "would be diamond stars." In the fifth inning Shuster who was on the firing line for his team, quit cold and refused to be longer made a victim by the opposing sluggers. Although Umpire Mansbach was bought, and repeated efforts were made by Bill Leamon, who was on the Squire's side to steal the game, it ended in a Pore victory by the score of 17 to 8.

About six o'clock the day's recreation was ended and all started homeward. Nothing but words or praise can be heard for the Merchant's picnic.

Mrs. Koehler Dead.

Martha (Barry) Koehler, wife of Phillip Koehler, of Reynoldsville, and mother of Roman F. Koehler, editor of the Donora American, died at the Mercy hospital in Pittsburg, Monday evening at nine o'clock. She was taken there one week ago for treatment and was operated upon last Friday. She seemed to rally slightly, but Monday evening about 5 o'clock her heart suddenly became weaker, and she died before her son, R. E. Koehler could reach her bedside. Mrs. Koehler was 52 years of age. Besides her husband in Reynoldsville and her son at Donora, she is survived by two daughters and one son.

SUCCESSFUL PICNIC.

THE Monessen Merchants' picnic held yesterday at Lynns grove was a success. It was a credit to the business men and all who took part. The threatening condition of the weather interferred to some extent with the attendance but not with the day's enjoyment.

It was the first picnic ever given by the Monessen Merchants and we are safe in saying that the impressions formed yesterday by all who attended were favorable and will be lasting. Those who participated went for a good time and had it. Entire families were there and there was amusement and recreation for all. To the man who cares for his home and family it is a pleasure to take an outing when he can take his wife and children along. The Merchants picnic yesterday was that kind, and it was thoroughly demonstrated that it was appreciated to a far greater extent than the "annual stag."

We believe that a prescedent has been established and that the merchants' picnic will be an annual event.

IN spite of the fact that Monessen is a "wet" town and has a number of licensed bars, there are, according to the Monessen Independent, a number of speakeasies in the place, and the mayor is about to raid them. That there are speakeasies in a licensed town will be hard for some Cannonsburg people to believe. They hold that only in prohibition towns are liquor joints found. Cannonsburg Notes.

FOR RENT—3 rooms, furnished or unfurnished, suitable for light housekeeping. Inquire Independent office. 30 4t

BROTHER Beck of the Fayette City Journal seems to be "kinder" sore because the street car company has not built the line to his town. Mr. Beck "knoweth not what he sayeth." He is injuring his town by agitating any thing of that sort. If the line ever goes to Fayette City the merchants up there will have to go out of business. The people will all come to Monessen to trade.

Our merchants will be benefitted but Brother Beck will have to write obituaries for the Fayette City merchants.

A Sudden Conversion

[Original.]

Frank Frost had been married but two months when his wife announced to him that she wished her mother to come to live with them. Frost had only kindly feelings toward Mrs. Englehart, but he flatly refused.

From that time his Bertha was changed toward him. She often failed to give him the connubial kiss when he went to business in the morning or on his return. When she did so it was without the previous heartiness. From feeling kindly toward her mother he gradually came to consider her a monster who had turned his wife from him. Certain hints as to this he dropped from time to time did not improve matters, and there grew up between the couple an estrangement.

One day when the husband returned from business he found that the blow he had begun to dread had fallen. His wife did not meet him at the door as she had done always before this matter had come between them, and, going into the house, there was an ominous silence. He called, but received no answer. Mounting to their bed room, he found a note on the dresser announcing that, since he considered his wife's mother not worthy to live with them, his wife did not consider that she ought to live with him.

A week passed—a long, lonely, miserable week. He was at times tempted to go after his wife and bring both her and her mother back with him, but invariably decided that if his wife would not live with him unless he received into the house that which would make his life still more miserable he had better accept the lesser evil. Besides, he considered that Mrs. Englehart had made all the trouble, and with each day his antagonism to her grew more bitter He finally made up his mind to go and make an effort to induce Bertha to return—without her mother—and, if he failed, to give her up entirely

It was at the beginning of the second week of Bertha's desertion that he took a train and rode a hundred miles to Mrs. Englehart's home. One evening he was admitted to the house, to find mother and daughter sitting together, the mother reading, the daughter doing fancy work. The former looked at him with a surprise which, to his astonishment, was accompanied by a pleasant smile. The latter, on seeing who the visitor was, bent her head low over her work, but he saw the color vanish from her face and her bosom heave tumultuously.

"Why, Frank," said Mrs. Englehart, "Bertha didn't tell me you were coming. My children have got up a surprise for me." Then, noticing that Bertha did not rise to greet her husband, she added, "It's Frank, Bertha." But, since Bertha maintained her position without even noticing her husband, the mother added further, "What does this mean?"

"It means," said Frank, "that I can't live alone as I am now doing any longer. If Bertha prefers to remain here with you I must close the house and go into bachelor quarters."

"Bertha," said Mrs. Englehart, "explain."

Bertha still hung her head.

"You didn't tell me there was trouble between you and Frank," said her mother.

"She didn't?" exclaimed Frank, astonished.

"No. She told me she had come to make me a visit."

Mollified toward the supposed enemy, Frank related the bare circumstances preceding his wife's departure.

"Bertha!" said her mother in the same tone she would have reproved her daughter when a child.

"He didn't act with proper consideration toward you, mother," said Bertha, "and I wouldn't stand it."

"Whom did he marry—you or me?"

"Me, I suppose."

"Bertha, I am astonished. I am ashamed of you. Why have you done this?"

"I wanted you, mother, and I thought that if I came to you he would"—

"Be weak enough to yield to you?"

To this there was no answer.

"Frank," said the mother-in-law ogre, "go upstairs and get the dust off. Then come down, and I will have some supper ready for you."

Never was a dank, heavy atmosphere more quickly cleared away than Frank Frost's antagonism toward the supposed cause of his trouble. Stepping forward, he folded Mrs. Englehart in his arms and gave her a hearty kiss; then, without noticing his wife, he left the room. He was standing before a mirror, brushing his hair, when he saw Bertha's reflection. She was standing in the door, a picture of contrition. Turning, he caught her in his arms.

"I suppose I've been very wicked," she said in a voice so faint that had his cheek not been against hers he would not have heard her.

"Never mind, sweetheart. I've been a fool. I've been inwardly abusing the best woman in the world. Hereafter I must have her always at hand to help me manage a lovely but wayward wife."

"She won't come. I knew how she would feel about living with us, and I wanted the invitation to come from you."

There was a call from below, and the two went downstairs hand in hand.

"Mrs. Englehart," said the beaming husband, "I came here to bring your daughter back without you. Now I will not take her back unless you go with us."

"Yes, you will, for I will never live with you. But I will make you a visit."

COALS OF FIRE

Denton Adams went west fully equipped, so far as education goes, to take a prominent stand. He had not been in his new home long when a vacancy occurred on the school board, and he was nominated for the position. Women voted in that section, and a woman was put up against Adams.

Rosa Day was the seemingly inappropriate name of the woman candidate—a name that smacks rather of a bright morning in a flower garden than a woman with assurance sufficient to stand for election in a heated campaign. When Mr. Adams heard the name of his opponent he pictured in his mind a blushing girl whom to treat with the ordinary campaign arguments would be a profanation, and he would have withdrawn had he not pledged himself to run if nominated. But when he heard that Miss Day was running her campaign with free attacks on the unfitness of the opposite sex to decide upon matters pertaining to children and his own unfitness in particular he girded up his loins for the fight.

Mr. Adams was on his way to speak at D. The town was off the line of any railroad, and Adams was obliged to travel by coach. Whether it is the seats facing each other, the narrow compass or the ruts, there is something about a stagecoach that throws people together. The candidate had by this time talked so much about the election that he was tired of it, and since he was not known to the few passengers present he was enabled to keep his identity a secret.

He was destined on this trip to meet his fate. Opposite him sat a girl apparently eighteen—she was twenty-two—as pretty as a red apple and as modest as a pansy. A man may meet thousands of women without being in the slightest degree affected by any of them. Then suddenly he may look upon a face and know that it belongs to the woman he wishes to be his wife. It was so with Adams when he looked upon the face of this girl. He soon scraped an acquaintance and, chatting in unrestrained stagecoach fashion, after a time drew forth an intelligence, a fund of information that surprised him. He was not to speak at D. till the next night, and when the young lady got off at M. he concluded to alight at the same town. She told him that she had an engagement for the first part of the evening, but would be happy to have him call at her aunt's, where she would stop after 9 o'clock. As he walked to the hotel he saw notices posted of a meeting to take place that evening for the discussion of the school question, and Miss Day would speak.

Being curious to see and hear his opponent, Adams after supper strolled around to the schoolhouse where the meeting was to take place, and, not wishing to be known, he drew up his coat collar, kept on his hat, which he pulled down over his eyes, and took a back seat. An old farmer opened the meeting with a short address, then introduced the speaker of the evening, the candidate for school commissioner, who arose from one of the front seats and took the stand.

Adams saw the young girl with whom he had traveled.

For half an hour he sat quietly, hearing himself denounced as one who, coming from the effete east, with its old fashioned educational customs, thought to introduce them among the children of the young and vigorous west. This was the burden of her argument for this particular evening. The address was well rounded, and long before it was finished Adams knew that it had been written and committed to memory. When the meeting was closed he sat till the speaker had passed out in company with an angular woman with a square jaw and a glittering eye, who looked far more like a candidate than Miss Day.

Adams followed his opponent home, and a few minutes after she had entered he rang and was admitted. The angular woman had gone on to another house, and he found Miss Day alone. He told her that he had been to the meeting and had heard her speak, but did not mention that she had been addressing, among others, her opponent. He found her as charming as she had been in the coach and not at all like the woman who could speak harshly of any one, even the man who was trying to get the office she coveted. He told her that "this man Adams" was to speak at D., a few miles farther on, the next night, and she resolved to go and hear him.

The next evening before the speaker entered one of the campaign committee announced that to avoid interruptions no one would be allowed to enter or depart until the candidate had finished his address. Only a few persons availed themselves of this notice to get out before the speaker entered and took the stand. He kept his eyes fixed on two ladies occupying a back seat, and his whole address was a modest statement of his own deficiencies for school commissioner and an encomium upon the merits of his opponent.

Surprised as was the audience at this address, the other voters, when they read a report of it, all were still more astonished to learn that Miss Day had withdrawn from the race, and, having quarreled with her campaign manager, it had come out that the manager had written Miss Day's speeches, who had committed them to memory.

Adams, having no opposition, was unanimously elected. He married Miss Day, who for a long while refused one who she said "had locked her in and then poured coals of fire on her head."

To cure an aching back,
The pains of rheumatism,
The tired-out feelings,
You must reach the spot—get at the cause.
In most cases 'tis the kidneys.
Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys.

Charles Bierbach, stone contractor, living at 2625 Chestnut St., Erie, Pa., says: "For two years I had kidney trouble, and there was such a severe pain through my loins and limbs that I could not stoop or straighten up without great pain, had difficulty in getting about and was unable to rest at night, arising in the morning tired and worn out. The kidney secretions were irregular and deposited a heavy sediment. Doctors treated me for rheumatism, but failed to help me. I lost all confidence in medicine, but Doan's Kidney Pills relieved me so quickly and so thoroughly that I gladly made a statement to that effect for publication. This was in 1898, and during the six years which have elapsed I have never known Doan's Kidney Pills to fail."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Bierbach will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price, 50 cents per box.

Politics and Love.

"It's funny," remarked Sandy Bowen "how politics and love are so much alike. For instance, if you meet a bonnie girl and she gives you half a chance to kiss her you go in for free trade. However, after you get married and your wife's mother wants to embrace her newly acquired son in law you go in for protection. Odd Knives.

In a monastery in Ireland there is a very curious collection of knives of the sixteenth century, the blades of which have on one side the musical notes to the benediction of the table, or grace before meat, and on the other side the grace after meat. The set of these knives usually consisted of four. They were kept in an upright case of stamped leather and were placed before the singer.

CHARLIE ROSS FOUND AGAIN.

This Time the Lost Boy Turns up in Texas.

When Joseph Likens a former resident of Galveston, told his friends in Mount Holly, N. J., last week, that he knew the solution of the famous Charlie Ross kidnaping, which stirred the entire United States 32 years ago, he caused William Von Hodge, a resident of Galveston, to come to the front today with a statement that he (Von Hodge) is the original Charlie Ross.

Von Hodge declared tonight that Likens met him many years ago, and told him that on July 1, 1874, he, as a boy, had been kidnaped from his mother's home in Germantown, Philadelphia. Further than that he Von Hodge said Likens would make no statement. However, as he believed that he must be the long-missing Charlie Ross, he saw some members of the Ross family, but they insisted that he had none of the physical resemblance of either his father or mother.

Has Filed Report.

State Veterinan Pearson today filed with Secretary of Agriculture Critchfield his annual report for the year 1905, in which he states that great progress was made during the year in the suppression of antrax and tuberculosis.

The report states also that tuberculosis is becoming less prevalent among cattle, and that last year this disease was the cause for the destruction of 1,352 cattle in Pennsylvania.

The report adds that vaccination against tuberculosis in this State as yet is applied only to young cattle, but it is thought the method may be developed so that it may be applied to the older cattle. Dr. Pearson concludes his report with the statement that the animals of Pennsylvania are in relatively good condition of health and that their products are decidedly above the average of other States.
